

Abstract

A method for checking whether an input data record is in the permitted working range of a neural network in which a definition of the complex envelope which is formed by the training input records of the neural network, and of its surroundings as the permitted working range of a 5 neural network and checking whether the input data record is in the convex envelope.